THE PRA HOSTS GUEST VISITORS FROM THE LARGEST UFO LIBRARY/ ARCHIVES IN THE WORLD!

On Saturday the 24th September we were pleased to greet Clas Svahn and Hakan Ekstrand, two Swedish visitors from 'AFU-Sverige' the largest library/UFO Archive in the world. They have 9 people working full time and are funded by private sponsorship and the Swedish Government! Clas Svahn is a member of the Riksorganisationen UFO-Sverige and Hakan Ekstrand was the editor of the 'UFO-Aktuellt' magazine. The purpose of their visit was to find old UFO records and elusive material, such as tape recordings of past (1960's) BUFORA meetings and old Crop Circle data, as their interests extend far beyond basic 'Flying Saucer' collections.

Clas Svahn and his colleague visit the UK every year contacting prominent UFO researchers and collecting data for the AFU archives. (There is grave concern that when a UFO researchers passes away, his/her records and research material may be confined to the nearest dustbin! Certainly this has happened in the past!) A hard disc copy of the material processed and recorded by AFU can be made available to the originator's.

In the event of a large batch of material being available for the AFU, then arrangements are made for it to be collected by a lorry sent directly from Sweden. As you may imagine the archive files of the 'AFU' are enormous and they employ six people full time (8 hour day) purely copying and computer digitizing and logging data (see photo below). The six are funded regularly by the Swedish Government on a 2 year contract.

During this years visit (22-28 September), the pair called upon John Rimmer, Dennis Plunket, Frances Copeland, Matt Lyons, Wendy Grossman, Ian Ridpath, Dr.David Clarke, Joe McGonaglr, Janet and Colin Bord, Steven Gerrard, Paul Fuller, Bob Rickard and ourselves, the PRA in Derby. They also visited Hilary Evans daughter Valentine (Mary Evans Picture Library).

COLIN ANDREWS RATTLES OBAMA'S CAGE!

Official response from the White House received tonight. Sent: Sat, 5 Nov 2011 2:25 Colin

Subject: Petition Response: Searching for ET, But No Evidence Yet

Searching for ET, But No Evidence Yet By Phil Larson who works on space policy and communications at the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy Thank you for signing the petition asking the Obama Administration to acknowledge an extraterrestrial presence here on Earth. The U.S. government has no evidence that any life exists outside our planet, or that an extraterrestrial presence has contacted or engaged any member of the human race.

In addition, there is no credible information to suggest that any evidence is being hidden from the public's eye. However, that doesn't mean the subject of life outside our planet isn't being discussed or explored. In fact, there are a number of projects working toward the goal of understanding if life can or does exist off Earth. Here are a few examples:

SETI—the Search for ExtraTerrestrial Intelligence—was originally stood up with help from NASA, but has since been moved to other sources of private funding. SETI's main purpose is to act as a giant ear on behalf of the human race, pointing an array of ground-based telescopes towards space to listen for any signal from another world.

Kepler is a NASA spacecraft in Earth orbit that's main goal is to search for Earth-like planets. Such a planet would be located in the "Goldilocks" zone of a distant solar system—not too hot and not too cold—and could potentially be habitable by life as we know it. The Kepler mission is specifically designed to survey our region of the Milky Way galaxy to discover Earth-sized, rocky planets in or near the habitable zone of the star (sun) they orbit.

The Mars Science Laboratory, Curiosity, is an automobile-sized rover that NASA is launching soon. The rover's onboard laboratory will study rocks, soils, and other geology in an effort to detect the chemical building blocks of life (e.g., forms of carbon) on Mars and will assess what the Martian environment was like in the past to see if it could have harbored life.

A last point: Many scientists and mathematicians have looked with a statistical mindset at the question of whether life likely exists beyond Earth and have come to the conclusion that the odds are pretty high that somewhere among the trillions and trillions of stars in the universe there is a planet other than ours that is home to life. Many have also noted, however, that the odds of us making contact with any of them—especially any intelligent ones—are extremely small, given the distances involved. But that's all statistics and speculation. The fact is we have no credible evidence of extraterrestrial presence here on Earth. Relevant Links:

WHAT A SCOOP!

Thanks to the technical work of Paul Usher (PRA), the 'Skycamera' that operates 24/7 videoing the sky over DERBY succeeded in catching a part of the NASA retrograde falling UARS satellite as it passed high over Derby when a fiery section fell through the cloud cover, illuminating the cloud as it did so.

It is likely that this PRA video is the only known photographic evidence of the satellite passing over the UK. It is believed that the heavier motor sections of the satellite ended up falling into the Pacific Ocean.

Satellite is caught on camera as it tumbles back to earth

PIECES of a Nasa satellite plunging towards Earth have been captured on camera by a Derby group that researches UFOs.

The Phenomenon Research Association had a camera, operating 24 hours a day, trained in the direction in which the Upper Atmospheric Research Satellite (UARS) was expected to fall.

On Friday at 9.55pm, it captured small parts of the satellite burning up as they hit the atmosphere.

The main part of the spacecraft entered the atmosphere over the Pacific Ocean.

Omar Fowler, the association's group leader, said the camera picked up the blue glow of the falling pieces of satellite.

He said: "They came through the clouds at about 10,000ft.

"In real time, it happened in a second but the stills are more clear.

"The colour of the lights was blue, which indicates that it was metal burning up.

"Meteorites would have a green glow."

Mr Fowler said there was "more chance of being hit by lightning" than of being struck by a piece of falling satellite.

UARS was Nasa's biggest spacecraft to tumble out of orbit uncontrolled in 32 years. It was launched aboard space shuttle Discovery in 1991.

Nasa decommissioned the satellite in 2005, after bringing it into a lower orbit, a move which cut its life short by two decades.

MORE UFO REPORTS FROM LEIGHTON BUZZARD

From the Leighton Buzzard Observer Published on Sunday 25 September 2011 15:00

AFTER last week's report concerning a reader who saw a strange, triangular-shaped object flying over the skies of Leighton, a couple have written to the LBO telling of their strange, close encounter on the same evening. An email from a woman, who only identified herself as 'Christine', said: "After reading the Observer this week and finding out that someone has seen what they think to have been a UFO, I can confirm that both my husband and I also witnessed this on Friday, September 9 between 11.30pm and midnight as we walked along the Woburn Road in Heath and Reach heading towards the direction of Leighton Buzzard.

"A bright orange light larger than an aircraft's landing lights and travelling at a considerable speed passed over us heading in the direction of Milton Keynes. As it passed above us we were aware that it was very quiet, almost silent, it looked like the shape of a triangle with rounded corners and a number of bright orange lights."

In another strange sighting, although more likely to some sort of military plane, reader Harvey Fryer said he saw an unusual sight over Leighton on Monday, September 19. He said: "At around 3pm, I saw what looked like a very low-flying grey military plane (a Hercules-type). From my flat in Town Bridge Mill, I could see the plane about half a mile from the canal, in the direction of Soulbury. It then banked sharply, in the direction of Dunstable. It was so low that I thought it would crash.

UNKNOWN OBJECTS OBSERVED IN NORWICH (UK)

There was a very interesting UFO sighting in Norwich, United Kingdom, on April 30, 2011. This article relates the eyewitness account of two different formations of UFOs which occurred in a ten minute span from 10:30 - 10:40 PM.

While the witness was walking with friends down King Street in the direction of a club called 'The Waterfront', he looked up and saw 9 separate lights in two groupings. They were moving quite rapidly in a westerly direction. The club sits on the River Wensum. At that time, the sky was somewhat hazy, and it was not possible to see any stars, yet the unknown objects were very clear to the witness. One group of objects had three lights, and the second had 6. They were moving in the direction of the North Sea, over the Norfolk Broads.

The second group of objects was originally comprised of 5, but a sixth soon joined. This last object made a very sharp turn to the right to join the group. The lights were mostly of a light amber color. Strangely, the first, smaller group formed into a V-pattern. One light seemed to be the lead light, with the other two following. The larger, more northerly group originally had 5 lights in a pyramid shape, with a lead light, then 2 behind on the left and right, and then 2 behind them with one on the outer left and another to the right of that, but in the middle. The sixth light headed towards this group and turned sharply in an unnatural fashion to take a place in the back of the group, on the right hand point of the pyramid.

A Veteran Plane Watcher

The witness was very familiar with planes being flown by the US Air Force, and Royal Air Force, and realized that the movement of the sixth light was extremely aggressive compared to the planes he normally saw. A gradual turn was the norm, but what he was seeing now was totally different. Oddly enough, when he pointed out the objects to his friends, they were not able to see them. The witness was an avid sky watcher, and able to easily differentiate between military, commercial, and civilian aircraft. These were not any of those. Another thing that convinced him these objects were not anything conventional is that planes rarely flew on Saturday nights.

Do Flying Triangles Have Underwater Bases?

Omar Fowler writes, "The arrival of a Flying Triangle UFO craft in Missouri and Kansas in 1980, caused concern and wonderment, as hundreds of witnesses, including policemen, watched a huge craft displaying a triangular pattern of lights, move slowly over the countryside for a period of four hours. It was seen over 22 towns and at one stage the enormous craft "as big as a football field." appeared to be dropping what a local truck driver described as satellites, which appeared to be round and emitted a bluish glow.

The whole event was tracked on radar during the four hour period. Within a decade, Flying Triangular craft were to be reported worldwide.

During January 1981, a huge boomerang shaped craft was seen over Arizona, with one witness proclaiming the object "was bigger than several football fields!" The V shaped craft was later reported over New York State and Connecticut in March 1983. Once again the craft was described as being "as big as two football fields" and this time, the craft flashed its lights on and off as though trying to attract attention. The next major event was the Belgian Flap, when huge triangular craft visited this small country during 1989/90.

The SOBEPS Group (Societe Belge d Etudes des Phenomenes Spatiaux), was inundated with hundreds of reports during this period. Such was the efficiency of their organization that the Belgian Air Force asked for their co-operation and assistance! With SOBEPS members being widespread throughout the country, they were able to identify Flying Triangles in their locality and report their position to the Belgian Air Force. In this manner, the SOBEPS members acted as trained observers for the Belgian Air Force. At one stage, two F-16 interceptor fighters were placed at their disposal, to be directed to various parts of the country where the Triangles were reported! This co-operation resulted in the F-16s intercepting a number of the Flying Triangles, although the F-16s were completely unable to match the speed and maneuverability of the craft, as subsequent cockpit radar film footage showed.

On September 26, 1993, a huge Flying Triangle craft arrived over Bakewell in Derbyshire, England. Many residents of this small town were to share in the experience of watching a huge black craft, slowly and silently flying over their town. With a bright white light on each corner of its triangular shape and numerous smaller lights running along the edges of the craft, the UFOs flew low and at an estimated speed of only 30 mph. A witness driving his vehicle at 40 mph overtook it!

On January 6, 1995, that a British Airways Boeing 737 aircraft was buzzed by a glowing triangular craft as it approached Manchester Airport! This was the forerunner of a Flying Triangle invasion, as they began to arrive in force.

There were 52 Flying Triangle incidents recorded in and around the city of Derby from December 1994 to May 1995. These included hovering illuminated craft and in one instance, a huge triangular craft was observed hovering over one of the main traffic islands (Spider Bridge) on the A5111 circular road. Numerous witnesses were able to sketch and describe the craft in detail. The reports include triangle craft hovering and shining down white beams of light "ending in mid air, like a fluorescent tube." The Flying Triangles (FT) appear to be coming in over the East coast of England and flying slowly across the countryside to various destinations including a number of Nuclear Power Stations, before returning back out to sea a few hours later.

Statistics from the Project FT database, under the late Victor J. Kean regularly reported in Filer's Files, have shown the following:

- 1995 - Total FT reports - 1797 of which 476 were observed over Nuclear Power Stations.
- 1996 - Total FT reports 1437 of which 988 were observed over Nuclear Power Stations.
- 1997 - Total FT reports - 1339 of which 1242 were observed over Nuclear Power Stations.

The Essex UFO Research Group under the able leadership of Ron West, (sadly no longer with us) states that since 1995, there have been reports of FT craft being seen entering and leaving the sea off the East coast near Lowestoft. There have also been 25 reports of lights seen moving under the surface of the sea in the same area. Could FTs have an undersea base somewhere along this coastline? Certainly, similar underwater activity has been reported from various parts of the world.

One startling coincidence has recently come to light and that is the number of references made to the subject of underwater bases by Larry Warren and Peter Robbins book "Left at East Gate. The book deals primarily with the UFO incident in Rendlesham Forest, England which took place in late December 1980, but then Larry Warren then goes on to reveal a further event.

It appears that after the incident, he got himself into trouble with the authorities by telephoning his mother about the UFO landing. He was subsequently ordered to go to a certain parking lot on the base where he would be met by a dark blue sedan car.

When Larry arrived at the parking lot, he saw the car. As he entered into the vehicle, he remembered a greenish glow and then by all account, lost consciousness. He later recovered to find himself in an underground complex under the Woodbridge base, where he learnt from a black uniformed guard that it was part of a tunnel complex that led to the North Sea (p61). Larry Warren was then taken into a strange darkened glass room, where he was contacted by a telepathic alien figure, partly hidden by a glowing screen.

Larry then learnt that he was in an underground complex that had been built in the 1940s. The complex contained many aliens, with their support personnel; Larry went on to state, "The crafts they traveled and entered and exited via an extensive tunnel system. One exit was a mile off Lowestoft, Suffolk another, near Orford Key." If Larry's encounter with the alien is true and not a hallucination, could it mean that the aliens are controlling the Flying Triangle craft that have been reported disappearing into the sea off Lowestoft? If there is an underground facility at the Woodbridge Air Force Base, does it have tunnels leading to the North Sea? Larry Warren claims that it does *. His co-writer Peter Robbins states, "It is quite an amazing aspect of Left At East Gate and one I am convinced is real though what REAL means has yet to be established".

The latest information received indicates that there is intense UFO activity along the East Coast, particularly near Lowestoft and strange things are still happening in the vicinity of Rendlesham Forest! Two independent sources have recently confirmed that not only does a tunnel system exist below Woodbridge, but it is joined to the nearby Bentwaters RAF Base and is part of an extensive tunnel system throughout England. We believe that a tunnel complex was built along this coast in the 1940s and we can only speculate that it was probably extended in total secrecy during the recent Cold War period. Thanks to Omar Fowler <http://www.ufocasebook.com/>

Editor's Note: Flying Triangles are frequently observed near bodies of water, power stations and electrical power lines. Indications are that the craft hide under bodies of water and capture electrical power.

ALIEN VISITORS ON EARTH?

By Omar Fowler

I was recently asked what grounds I had for making a statement on TV claiming that Alien beings could well be intermingling with us on Earth and we were quite unaware of it!

There have been a number of incidents that have taken place over the years where a member of the public has described an unusual contact with a stranger who indicated that he was not from Earth.

In December 1975 I investigated one such event that took place in May 1974 in Farnborough, Hants.

Mr Wally Churn, at the time lived in Cove, Farnborough, Hampshire and this story came to light as the result of an investigation into another UFO incident.

Mr Churn stated that in May 1974 he was on his way to work and the time was approximately 7.50am. He usually cycles to the local paper shop, adjacent to a shopping precinct called 'Queensmead', where he stops regularly for a newspaper and cigarettes. The shop is close to a pedestrian crossing.

Mr Churn takes up the story:

"I was about to cross over the road (on the pedestrian crossing) when this fellow spoke to me, I didn't take any notice of him, I knew he was there but I ignored him. It was two minutes past eight and I was late for work. He (the stranger) spoke again, 'I am Fr... (Mr Churn said the name escaped him, but it sounded like Freka, Alfrika or something like that). 'I am from the saucer people, do you understand?' The stranger then held out his hand....I took his hand, but at that time of the morning I don't want to know anybody, I just wanted to get my paper and cigarettes and I was late for work.....I took two or three paces, stopped and turned around, but there was nobody in sight. I looked around the corner but he had gone."

"I walked to the paper shop and said something like 'that's a strange one, that joker'. I mean I'm in that shop every morning and I've never met anyone like that before. Thinking back, I remember that his speech was not clear English but something like German."

When questioned about the facial features of the mysterious man, Wally Churn continued:

"Yes, I would normally remember a face, but this face was not long, but round, almost without a chin. He did not appear to shave, his face was smooth. I also remember his hands, he had small hands like a woman and his hands were cold. I had been pushing my bike and my hands were warm. It was only as I walked away that I realised that his features were unusual, because his eyes had no pupils, no black just a greeny colour. He was tall, about six feet and he dressed normally, in grey I think and he wore a trilby (hat). He had short hair, not long hair and was in his early thirties."

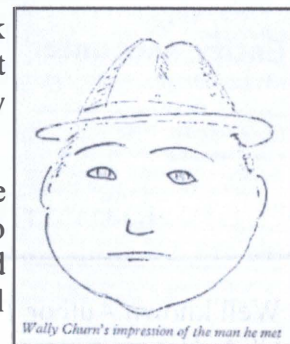

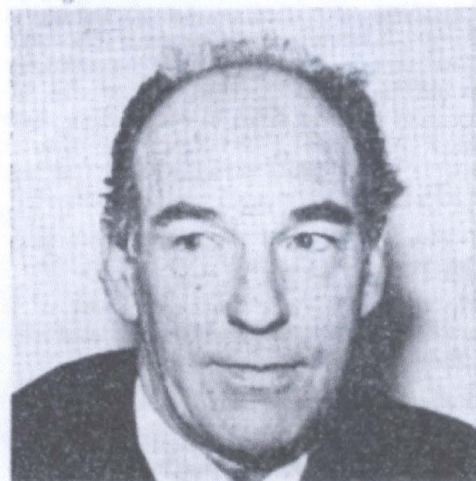

"He wasn't dressed unusual, it wasn't that, it was afterwards when I got to work on my job, I began to get 'pins and needles' in my right hand and forearm. At least it wasn't that but something similar. I also had a red spot come up on my thumb."

"Why did he come to me? I tried to brush him aside. When he said 'I am from the saucer people' it didn't mean a thing. When things like this happen I want to know why! As a matter of fact I have been looking out for him (since), I would like to sit down and have a chat to him. At least then I would know what it was all about, I don't like this, not knowing."

Question: At the time of the incident, was there nowhere this person could have gone?

"No, there is an alley, but he was nowhere to be seen!" (Edited from original interview. Contd. next page)

Continuing with the subject of Aliens contacting people on Earth, what could be better than to reproduce an article from the Sunday Times (2 November 1997) describing a 'contact' incident involving the equerry to Prince Philip!

What the aliens told the equerry about Prince Philip

by Hugh McManners
and Walter Ellis

WHAT would you do if you were an alien observer keen to establish contact at the highest level with the British Establishment?

You might attempt to reach the prime minister — but it's so hard to get through. The same would apply to the Foreign Office, the defence ministry and the intelligence services. Most likely, they would have you thrown out or locked up.

Janus, an interstellar emissary assigned to the British beat, decided to go for broke: he would arrange an audience with the Duke of Edinburgh.

Thus it was, on a damp and misty evening, in the winter of 1954, that Squadron Leader Peter Horsley, equerry to Prince Philip, found himself driving out of the main gates of Buckingham Palace on his way to the strangest, and most unearthly, encounter of his life.

A meeting had been arranged by a general for him to meet a Mrs Markham in a flat in Smith Street, Chelsea. The squadron leader was expecting little more than sherry and biscuits.

What he got, he said last week, was an introduction to man's destiny in the stars and a briefing on the supreme being, the Great Force, who commands the universe.

Had such a claim appeared in the National Enquirer or the Daily Sport, it could readily have been dismissed. In fact, it came from Air Marshal Sir Peter Horsley, former deputy commander-in-chief of Strike Command, whose memoirs, Sounds From Another Room,

All in a day's work: Horsley, left, as a high-flying official are published this month.

Other top military types have also claimed stellar acquaintance. In 1988 a retired admiral caused a stir when he claimed to have met an alien called Alan. Horsley, however, was a mere squadron leader, and, according to his story, it was the duke who was the object of Janus's attention.

"Prince Philip," said the stranger, "is a man of great vision, a person of world renown and a leader in the realm of wildlife and the environment."

He is a man who believes strongly in the proper relationship between man and nature, which will prove of great importance in future galactic harmony."

Horsley — destined to be in charge of sending British nuclear bombers on missions deep inside the former Soviet Union in the event of war — realised he had to tread warily. Janus, fortunately, understood this as well.

"Where would you like to start?" he asked.

Many would have wished to begin by taking a better look at this mysterious stranger from the other side of the galaxy. Not Horsley.

"It is difficult," he writes, "to describe him with any accuracy; the room was poorly lit by two standard lamps and for the most part he sat in a deep chair by the side of a not very generous fire."

"In fact, I never really got any physical impression of him."

Tall, thin, short, fat, grey, white or green: Horsley does not recall. Instead, no doubt aware that such an opportunity might not come again, he pressed straight in with his questions.

"As an airman," he began, "one of the difficulties I have with the idea that UFOs fly here from another planet is the vast distances involved."

Quite so. "That's a good start," his visitor replied, before launching into a long disquisition on the reality of interstellar travel.

Apparently, in the next century or so, mankind will become bored with its exploration of the solar system and press on into deep space, employing technology that bends the time-space continuum and enables us to travel 1,000 light years in (relatively speaking) just 30 Earth years.

The future air marshal was understandably intrigued — not least by his realisation that Janus was telepathic and could read his thoughts.

The conversation ranged far and wide, ranging from Genesis and the Pyramids to the prospect of a universe teeming with life forms, all owing allegiance to the Great Force.

Horsley remembers the encounter with total recall and noted it down in a report to his superiors. What they made of his tale is not known.

But ever since, the retired air marshal, author of the Journal of a Stamp Collector and holder of the Portuguese Order of Christ, has been "at intellectual peace with the concept of God as a universal spiritual force without shape or habitat, a cosmic battery, if you like."

As for Prince Philip, Horsley left the Smith Square flat and made no attempt to pass on the extra-terrestrial invitation to his royal master.

When he later returned to the flat it was empty, and he never saw Janus again.

He thought no more about it — until now. "I was aged 33, very busy and had to get on with my job. So that's what I did."

THE SUNDAY TIMES • 2 NOVEMBER 1997

Well known Author Timothy Good has quoted his own 'contact' experience while travelling in the USA. Having time on his hands, sitting in a hotel vestibule, he had the idea of putting out a mental request for any 'Alien' in the area to come and visit him...A stranger later appeared, sat close to him and started reading a paper, then at Tim's mental request folded his paper, stood up, smiled and walked out!

Witness with Family History of Alien Encounters By Billy Booth Sept 8th 2011

I would like to present a report from one of our readers. He and his family have experienced UFO sightings and alien abduction for many years. Here is his story.

My family and UFO experiences go way back to 1958, and my story is a fascinating one that now includes (4) of my sons.

My daughters have not been subjected to abduction or any unusual experiences apart from one of my daughters witnessing UFO craft flying above our home and hovering directly across the road from our former home situated on beach front in Two Rocks of Western Australia.

As the experiences were becoming so upsetting and intense my wife and I decided to sell and leave the immediate area thinking that we would be free of what was becoming a real serious problem for us, as not only was I dealing with my own repeated abduction, but at the time and within a short space of time (2) of my sons were also abducted.

Family Relocates; Experiences Continue

Needless to say, we sold up and left the beach side area thinking that would be the end of it; not so in fact. After our move had taken place, we found that not only was a strange craft witnessed hovering above our new home for at least 8 minutes according to a neighbor and his son, but (2) more of my sons had now been subjected to very strange things happening to them.

My youngest son from the age of 7 years has been reporting to us that spiky balls of light are appearing outside his window and on some occasions have ventured into his bedroom, lighting up his room. He has gotten to know enough about them to identify them with different names that he claims they are called.

Sons' Strange Experiences

At first we thought he was just having bad dreams, from something he may have seen on TV. However, it wasn't until I had witnessed the very bright light coming from his room early one morning that I began to take him seriously.

The light was way too intense to be from a torch as it was so bright it could only be compared to that of a playing field night time light. It was really that intense and only lasted for a second or two.

Both my wife and I don't disregard anything that our youngest son reveals to us anymore. In addition to this, my 16-year-old son has been awoken very late at night and early hours of the morning with an exceptional glow that has caused him to go to his window to check it out.

To his amazement he watched a very large, glowing sphere that was approximately 400 yards away from our property and directly across the road. He watched it hovering just above the ground as it glowed in a pulsating manner. He said after about 4 or 5 minutes it seemed to blink out. He could not believe this had happened; that something so intense just switched off like that. So feeling confused and very tired, he decided to return to his bed. He went on to explain to me and his Mother that he didn't know how long it was after he had returned to his bed that he awoke to a feeling that someone or something was very close to him; someone was watching him.

Son Witnesses Alien Being

He felt compelled to once again return to his window and as he pulled his curtains aside to look out, he noticed that there was no glowing light. However, from the corner of his eye he noticed a very strange and scary looking being that was looking straight at him.

He went on to tell us how he felt an instant fear and pulled the curtain completely closed and jumped back into bed, pulling the blankets over him in total fear.

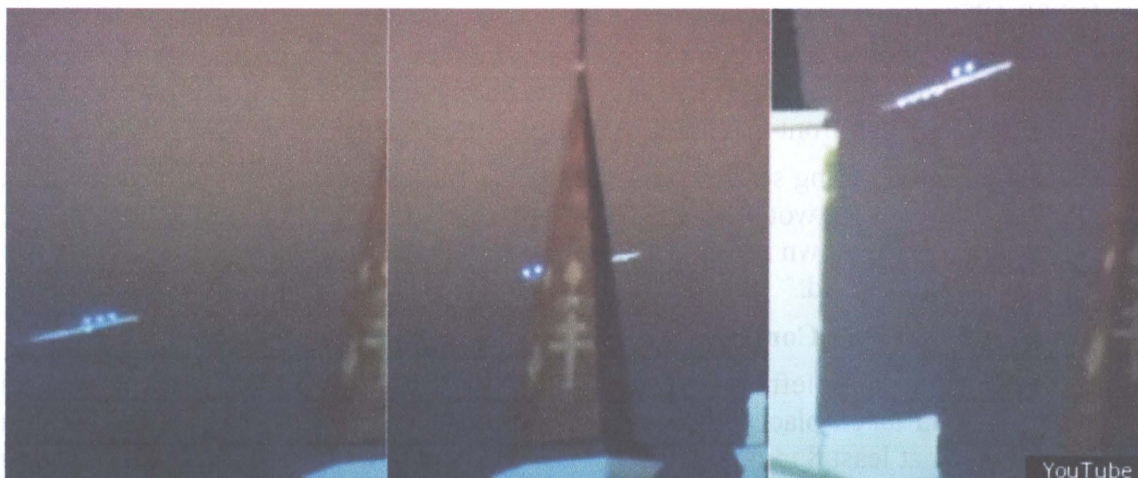

He ended the conversation by saying that he had never been so scared and just hoped that this unwanted visitor would go away.

More details about this, my other sons and myself are available through Wikileaks community - www.niternat.com.

UFO AT NFL GAME: (USA)

TV Camera Captures Strange Object In Flight During Broadcast

First Posted: 11/1/11 08:34 AM ET Updated: 11/2/11 02:25 PM ET

In this remarkable three-frame video sequence that moved from right to left and barely lasted one second, an illuminated object appears to streak behind the steeples of the St. Louis Cathedral in New Orleans on Oct. 23, 2011. Explanations include an insect and an elongated object known as a ROD.

For many football fans who watched the New Orleans Saints rout the Indianapolis Colts on Oct. 23, the most unusual thing about the game was the lopsided final score of 62-7. But for UFO aficionados and paranormal experts who tuned in, they may have seen something in the sky that was even more out-of-the-ordinary than the tossing of more touchdowns vs. incompletions.

As NBC's cameras returned from a commercial break and focused on the historic, triple-steepled St. Louis Cathedral in the city nicknamed the Big Easy, a couple of lit objects seemed to streak across the darkening sky -- and they've yet to be definitively identified. Viewed in real-time, it's hard to see much more than something flashing across the screen. But a frame-by-frame scrutiny of the video reveals a rod-shaped object topped with brightly lit dots.

Rod-shaped UFOs? Actually, this isn't the first time such objects have been seen and photographed.

In 1994, independent filmmaker Jose Escamilla was attempting to videotape UFOs near Roswell, N.M. - - yes, that Roswell -- home of the legendary, alleged crash of a UFO in 1947 that has captured the imaginations of millions of people for decades. "As I reviewed one of the tapes, I noticed something streak past my camera viewfinder and thought at first it was just a bird or insect," Escamilla told The Huffington Post. "Looking at each frame of the footage again, I knew it was something more unusual. My wife called them 'rods' as they sort of looked like some kind of life form you'd see in a microscope."

Since that time, Escamilla has collected hundreds of taped examples from around the world of these so-called rods, which vary in physical form: Some look like centipedes with appendages and others have no appendages but appear to have lights on top of them.

Skeptics maintain there's nothing extraordinary about all of this -- the objects, they say, are merely insects flying very close to the camera lens. "I think these are insects that got caught in that interlaced video as they're flying through with a wing beat frequency, and the frames are being captured at a frequency... that causes that look," insisted Marc Dantonio, chief pand video analyst for the Mutual UFO Network. But one little frame of the video may be the one little problem that could rule out the insect theory. Amazingly, the frame reveals the mystery object is moving behind one of the cathedral towers. But how could that be if it was only an insect? (Source: AOL News)

Hello Omar

Well, standing near the beach and looking out to sea on a beautiful Spring day it's hard to believe a disaster is unfolding. You can clearly see the ship on the horizon. The many hundreds of volunteers have done a magnificent job cleaning up the initial oil spill and debris. There has been a real community spirit with businesses donating food and refreshments and locals bringing down home cooking.

The ship is still intact despite several large tears that have developed down the sides. The removal of oil by pump to a support vehicle has been a slow job due to its extremely thick consistency. Luckily expected rough weather earlier in the week didn't turn out to bad. Big seas could easily break the ship in half. This is the big concern... to get the oil off before that happens. Dozens of the containers have fallen overboard because of the severe list. Some have washed ashore, others are marked by buoys and some are unaccounted for, posing a risk to other boats. Of real concern is we are just at the start of the cruise ship season which brings a much needed financial boost to the region.

If the sea becomes covered in oil they may bypass us. This is an area that depends on the summer holiday trade to carry it through the year. I'll attach and also send some news links for a better update. Many thanks for caring!! Ian.

EINSTEIN AND UFO'S

A little-known tape of a famed broadcaster's lecture that was delivered over sixty years ago suggests that is precisely what had happened. It also suggests that Albert Einstein was one of those brilliant scientists. In the tape, which can be heard below, we learn that Einstein and other science notables had expressed to President Truman their concern about the UFOs, including those seen flying above our nation's Capitol. According to Frank Edwards a radio broadcaster Albert Einstein and other prominent scientists had delivered an urgent message to then President Harry Truman, "not to attempt to shoot down the UFOs." Einstein maintained a long-standing and close relationship with a physicist who was a key member of a CIA UFO study group.

In the St. Louis Post Dispatch, 7/30/52 reported that Einstein wrote evangelist Louis Gardner in reply to Gardner's query about UFOs: "These people have seen something. What it is I do not know and I am not curious to know?" It sounds more like Einstein simply does not wish to engage someone outside of his circle on this obviously sensitive matter. Einstein feared our potential for a war-like reaction to the continued flyovers of craft that were piloted by beings that were not from here and that were unknown to science. Editor's Note: Einstein was likely aware of the heavy losses of military aircraft in engagements with the UFOs. Timothy Good writes, "The destruction or disappearance of military aircraft during interceptions of UFOs continued apace." As General Benjamin Chidlaw, former commanding general of the Air Defense Command told Robert C. Gardener (ex USAF) in 1953: "We have stack of reports of flying saucers. We take them seriously, when you consider we have lost many men and planes trying to intercept them."

Leonard Stringfield, a former Air Force intelligence officer was told by a reliable source in the 1950s that the "Air Force was losing about a plane a day to the UFOs. According to US Defense Department figures, from 1952 until the end of October 1956, there were 18,662 major accidents of military aircraft, broken down as follows:

Year	Air Force	Navy	Total Accidents
1952	2,274	2,086	= 4360
1953	2,075	2,325	= 4400
1954	1,873	1,911	= 3784
1955	1,664	1,566	= 3230
1956	1,530	1,358	= 2888

Of this astonishing four year total of 14,302 US aircraft losses, many involved jets scrambled to intercept UFO's, of which 56.2 per cent were found to be caused by pilot error; 8.1 per cent by ground-crew failure; 23.4 per cent by failure of equipment in the aircraft; and 9.5 per cent (1,773) were due to 'unknown factors'. EX-CIA DIRECTOR COMMENTS ON UFO'S

Admiral Roscoe Hillenkoetter, the first director of the CIA stated in the New York Times in 1959, " These UFOs are interplanetary devices systematically observing the earth."

Admiral Hillenkoetter also said that "behind the scenes, high-ranking Air Force officers are soberly concerned about the UFO's. But through official secrecy and ridicule, many citizens are led to believe the unknown flying objects are nonsense."

The retired admiral said that he charged that "to hide the facts, the Air Force has silenced its personnel through the issuance of a regulation ."

‘MARS’ The Strange Attraction of Gale Crater

Sept. 29, 2011: Curiosity is about to go to Mars. The car-sized rover, also known as the Mars Science Lab, is scheduled for launch in late November or early December 2011 from the Kennedy Space Center.

After an eight-month voyage to Mars, Curiosity will land at the foot of a 3 mile high mountain in a crater named "Gale." It sounds a little odd—a mountain in the middle of an impact crater. Wouldn't the impact have smashed it flat? Some scientists believe the 96 mile wide crater filled in with sediments over time and relentless Martian winds carved a mountain in the center, where it now stands nearly three times higher than the Grand Canyon is deep.

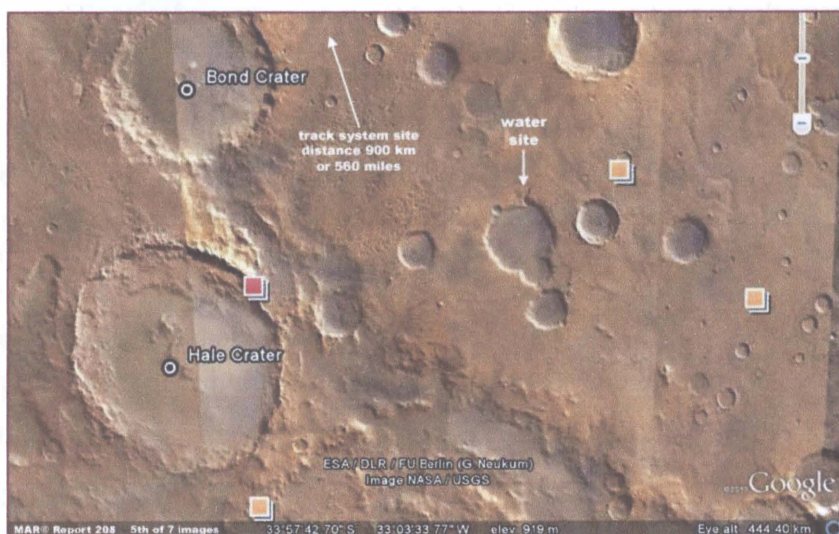

Because of its history, this strangely sculpted mountain is the ideal place for Curiosity to conduct its mission of exploration into the Red Planet's past. Joy Crisp, MSL Deputy Project Scientist from NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory, explains: This may be one of the thickest exposed sections of layered sedimentary rocks in the solar system. The rock record preserved in those layers holds stories that are billions of years old -- stories about whether, when, and for how long Mars might have been habitable." Today the Red Planet is a radiation-drenched, bitterly cold, bleak world. Enormous dust storms explode across the barren landscape and darken Martian skies for months at a time. But data from the Mars Reconnaissance Orbiter suggest that Mars once hosted vast lakes and flowing rivers. "Gale Crater and its mountain will tell this intriguing story," says Matthew Golombek, Mars Exploration Program Landing Site Scientist from JPL. "The layers there chronicle Mars' environmental history."

MARS TRACK SYSTEM & WATER

Extract from Report # 208 October 2 2011 Joseph P. Skipper

The image with its wide-angle context view demonstrates the location of this crater water evidence site just to the right of center in the image. As you can see, other craters around this one are also suggestive of being water sites in this more distant view and probably are. However, most of these are more visually compromised by the combination of false color and smudge that carpet this entire strip and are therefore less revealing when examined closer.

TALE ENDERS

From: COAST TO COAST (USA) :October 22nd

George Noory welcomed researcher and author Linda Godfrey for an update on the latest cryptozoological sightings around North America. She reported on an dogman encounter in Maine, where a couple renting a farmhouse witnessed several 7-foot tall wolf-like creatures walking upright on their hind legs advancing toward them. They took refuge in their house, peering from a window on the second floor, and watched in amazement as the creatures stared up at them, she said. Godfrey related a dogman sighting that took place at Mount Baldy in Alberta, where a hiker claimed to have come face to face with an upright walking dogman. The creature appeared to recognize the hiker's camera and ran off, she added.

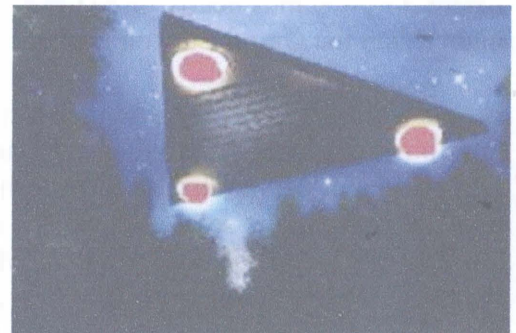

SOYUZ SUCCESSFULLY RETURNS TO FLIGHT FOR SPACE STATION

The Russian Soyuz rocket, flying for the first time in the exact configuration that suffered a launch failure in August, successfully launched Sunday (30 October) from the Baikonur Cosmodrome. The booster climbed to orbit with a re-supply ship headed toward a Wednesday docking at the International Space Station and paved the way for human flights to resume in mid-November.

MICHIGAN TRIANGLE

Ypsilanti -- About 1:15 AM, on September 26, 2011, I was on my porch having a cigarette, and was looking up and saw a triangle with three red lights on the corners. It was moving from south to north, as though it was invisible and appeared and then disappeared. I watched it move silently across the sky for about 30 seconds and then it disappeared. It was skipping fast across the sky. Due to the craft's lights gave the appearance of it skipping, but I knew it was moving on a straight path.

ROOSEVELT --I was coming home on June 22, 2011, on Cedarville Road heading for my road and saw a light through the trees in the eastern skies. I thought it was the moon. Then I see a gigantic flying low craft with four lights across in a row about the size of half a football field. The two in the middle were very bright like headlights, but the light was much diffused.

The huge craft was moving NW incredibly slower than any plane making a low hum. It was like a cruise liner in the sky with a blinking red light on the bottom. I sped home as I was terrified by this huge craft and felt hot all over. I woke my Mom up; who is a scientist but it was gone. A similar craft was over the turnpike earlier.
